

The Peninsula Chicago The Peninsula Suite

For nearly a century, The Peninsula Hotels has been a brand committed to providing personalized, attentive service, amid exceptional, well-appointed settings. The Peninsula Chicago's (peninsula.com/chicago) newly redesigned Peninsula Suite takes this commitment further with a private residentially inspired experience boasting 3,600 square feet of living space and a private 2,000 square foot wraparound terrace overlooking Lake Michigan. The expansive suite, which can be extended from one to three bedrooms, taking an entire wing of the building, can accommodate today's most discerning travelers by ensuring their safety and privacy, thanks to an array of unique inclusive services including a dedicated housekeeping and guest relations team.

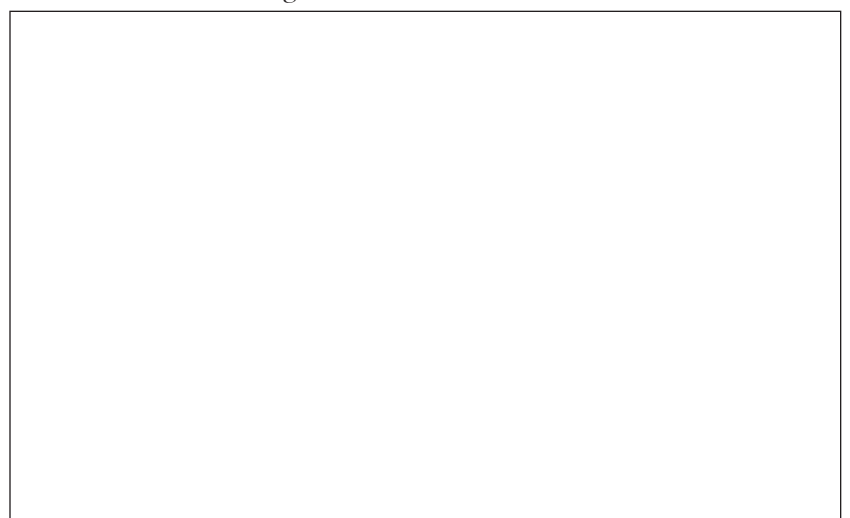

Overseeing the redesign of The Peninsula Suite was Maria Zec, The Peninsula Chicago's Managing Director and Regional Vice President, who joined the hotel in 2002, shortly after its opening. Under her leadership, the hotel has received many accolades, including the AAA Five Diamond and Forbes Five Star services awards for 21 years in a row.

The redesign of The Peninsula Suite reveals a modern, contemporary style, including updating the suite's technology, expanding the master bedroom, and converting the former study and fitness rooms into two distinct and spacious private dressing rooms. The design scheme showcases many tones of blue, in a nod to the waters of Lake Michigan and the Chicago River, both iconic to locals and visitors alike. A large living room features a grand piano, fireplace and large picture windows and glass doors leading to the outdoor terrace. The hand painted gold walls in the dining room create a stimulating environment and a beautiful backdrop to the living space. Custom-made Bubinga wood furnishings are found throughout the suite in the den and study, as well as in the bedroom and dressing areas.

The Peninsula Hotels maintains a deep commitment to the arts, and this is carried through to the collection in The Peninsula Suite. The art, originally curated for The Peninsula Suite 23 years ago, has been repositioned throughout the new setting, providing a fresh perspective on each piece. The hotel commissioned three artistic details – representing different florals – to bring more nature into the suite. Additionally, two works of art were purchased from a local Chicago artist, Mariano Chavez.

The Peninsula Suite represents what The Peninsula Hotel Chicago is known for – the opportunity for guests to experience Far Eastern graciousness combined with Midwestern hospitality. ●
