

I am pleased and honored to collaborate with LEADERS Magazine on curating another special feature highlighting “Resilience.” I reached out to some of my great friends who are leaders from government, business, nonprofits, public health, sports, the arts, and the military to share their perspective.

The purpose of these profiles is to provide outstanding people with the opportunity to speak about the things that matter to them and the times where resilience helped them reach their goal and to share their insight and perspective.

The subject of resilience has deep personal meaning to me. It has become my passion and purpose to learn about resilience. Who has resilience, can it be taught, encouraged, or learned?

I hope that you will find the insights on the following pages to be of interest, and I would like to hear your thoughts. Please feel free to share with me directly at info@arsht.com.
